One of the best features in Fire Pro D is the ability to download new moves from SPIKE. Here's a nice, clean list of the moves and wrestlers who use them. Fictional moves aren't assigned wrestlers, and I'm only mentioning wrestlers who either do the exact move or something nearly identical to it (aka Shubain used as an Air Raid Crash, but not the Shiranui used as an Acid Drop/Dudley Dog). Consider this a FAQ, of sorts...

Filenames are in parentheses, with the last 3 characters representing the move. Files are listed as FIREPROD.Wxx (the first move is FIREPROD.W00).

To download these moves, go to www.gswf.org, a GREAT Fire Pro site!

Blazing Tornado Suplex (.w00) - fictional move

*Notes*

Shining Wizard - From substance J: "The move has become as much of an in-joke as a phenomenon, so tons of people are using it, but not all I would actually assign it to. Like for example, Hido did one in Big Japan (with a set of light tubes propped against the guy's head, pretty freaking cool...), but I'm not sure if I'd really give it to him as a regular move. Taiyo Kea on the other hand, uses it more seriously"

Brazilian Kick Rush - like many of the combination/rush moves in Fire Pro games, the fighter may not necessarily use that EXACT pattern, but most MMA fighters don't really have set moves High-Speed Dragon Screw - Everybody does the move slightly different, but this was especially made for Mutoh. Kea has been using a few of Mutoh's moves as his tag team partner.

Amaze Impact - Taue has done the move a few times and has had it in AJPW videogames, but it's Takeshi Morishima's finisher.

Shubain - used as a more-than-appropriate substitute for the Air Raid Crash, which involves running before performing the move.

Triple Moonsault - Sure, Super Crazy does it off all turnbuckles instead of just two, but could it be any more accurate otherwise?

Electric Chair Drop - animated exactly as SUWA does it, but is still a perfect substitute for Edge and Kanyon's use of the move.

Cattle Mutilation - Many have said Low-Ki has used the move, mainly basing it on a picture floating around, but in said picture it is Low-Ki who is the victim of the move, not the performer.

Complete Shot - A decent substitute for the inverted russian leg sweep that Kanyon and Edge do, but not in any way animated like said move.

McEnroe - This move got very little hype when it came out, but from everything I know it is done by Manabu Nakanishi. Many use it for the junior heavyweight leg sweep, but not only does that move usually involve the other wrestler to be running, but it is not done with the force of the McEnroe.

Reverse Waterwheel Drop - It could be a substitute for Booker T's high-angle spine buster, but it doesn't have nearly enough impact for me to consider it necessary to assign to him.

Blazing Chop - excellent substitute for Ivan Putski's Polish Hammer.

***Thanks to substance J, TheMajesticalOne, and of course Jim Freeman for getting these moves for us, and Jeff Scott for hosting them on his site!
