Standard copyright stuff, you know the drill.

The game and all the stuff in it are 7 to the people that own it.

This FAQ is 7 to me, since I wrote it and all.

Make a little birdhouse in your soul.

Any unauthorized reproduction, free or for profit, can be met with legal action, so do the right thing and ask me first. Most likely, I won't care, and you'll be able to stick it wherever you feel like sticking it at the time (and remember that some things should be kept to yourself). It will be up to you to make sure the most current copy is on your site. All updates will be posted on GameFAQs.

Oh, and if you're making a FAQ/Walkthrough or something and would like to use this info, please just make sure that you give me credit somewhere, because this took a bloody good chunk of time to make. That does not, I repeat, NOT mean that you can just C&P the whole thing in there, though. It would probably be best to just refer someone to the guide, if you plan on posting it at GameFAQs anyhow...

I. Intro

Hi.

What, you want a bloody novel or something?

Well, I guess I can say a little bit of something about it all...

This thing got started because I was on Xmas break and had nothing better to do. I like Grandia, I noticed there wasn't anything on

GameFAQs listing the American version's moves, I was insanely bored at the time, so I did this.

I should probably give a quick note on my recording method, while I'm here, as well. I've written all the special coin and magic coin requirements down as what it takes to gain the next level. That's why you don't see Level 5 in the tables anywhere, because 5 is the max, so there's nothing needed to get to the nonexistent next level. Comments are welcome, so send them. Complaints aren't as fun as praise, so try not to send too many of the first and plenty of the second.
