1. This is my move list for Chris Benoit for the new WWF game, WWF No Mercy. This is an incomplete version of his move list, I will try to finish it before the end of November.

I have been a fan of his since 1993, for those of you who have just become fans of his, here's a brief rundown of his career since then:

1993: Worked in WCW

1994: Worked in Mexico and Japan. Wins the Super J-Cup tournament in New Japan Pro Wrestling.

1995: Won ECW Tag Team Titles with Dean Malenko.

Came back to WCW in September. Joined the legendary 4 Horsemen.

1996: Feuded with Kevin Sullivan and had some of the most brutal matches in history.

1997: Career is kind of in limbo, nothing of note occurs.

1998: Won the WCW Television title twice from Booker T. Has a memorable Best of Seven series with him.

1999: Won the WCW Tag Team Title twice, once with Dean Malenko and once with Perry Saturn. Won the United States Title from David Flair. Lost it to Sid Vicious at September's Fall Brawl. Won the Television Title from Rick Steiner the next night on Nitro.

2000: One of his biggest years ever. Won the WCW World Heavyweight Title from Sid Vicious at January's Souled Out Pay-Per-View. He was never seen on WCW TV after the title win, which was never acknowledged on TV. Left WCW for the WWF in late January with Perry Saturn, Dean Malenko, and Eddie Guerrero, they were called the Radicalz. Won the WWF InterContinental Title in a Triple Threat match at Wrestlemania 2000. Won the WWF World Title from the Rock at the July Pay-Per-View, Fully Loaded, only to have Commissioner Mick Foley reverse the decision and restart the match, Benoit lost.
